

Bradcon Joinery tackles growing demand

Bradcon Bespoke Joinery has been operating in London since 1998, providing high-quality made-to-order products such as staircases, box sash window frames and fitted furniture to the London and M25 area. When choosing a new sliding table saw for its workshop, Felder's reputation and positive reviews in the trade press convinced Bradcon to choose the K975 Professional.

Just a few weeks into using the K975, Bradcon was so impressed with the performance of the machine that it agreed to demonstrate it for a prospective customer and share its positive experience.

With prestigious clients such as 10 Downing Street, quality and precision are of the utmost importance to Bradcon. The company could not be happier with the performance of its new K975 P. Bradcon co-owner Charlie Ling, comments: "The saw cuts so smoothly that there is no need to finish workpieces on a thicknesser. We get great results and save time, too."

Speed is another important factor for Bradcon – 2011 has been a busy year for joinery, with an increasing number of orders coming in. "We're very happy with how fast and easy to operate the K975 is," says Armando Mednis, workshop manager, also mentioning the added comfort of the X-Roll precision guiding system for the sliding table. "We've really noticed a difference in the speed of production."

Finally, with several users taking turns on the machine, setting repeatability is a valuable asset, as Armando confirms. A major contribution to this is the Felder degree index for angle adjustment, which guarantees a quick and easy set-up every time.

With the speed, precision and ease of use the K975 Professional offers, Bradcon is confident it will be able to accept even more commissions and continue to grow its business.
